

Governor

The State Constitution assigns the Governor the supreme executive power of this state. This role is continuously redefined through constitutional and statutory changes and through accepted practice. The Governor is head of the executive branch of government, but also has legislative responsibilities, as well as serving as an agent of communications with other states and the federal government.

The Governor's executive branch responsibilities include appointing the heads of departments, agencies, and institutions. Also, mid-term vacancies in certain positions outside the executive branch, such as judges, are filled initially by gubernatorial appointment.

By holding cabinet meetings, communicating with other state officers and overseeing budget expenditures, the Governor fulfills the responsibility to see that the laws are faithfully executed. The Governor further fulfills this responsibility by serving as an ex-officio member on a number of boards and commissions.

The Governor's legislative responsibilities include reporting to the Legislature annually on affairs of the state (the State of the State Address) and submitting a budget recommendation. Other legislative recommendations may also be issued by the Governor. Further, the Governor may veto legislation passed by the Legislature and may convene the Legislature in extraordinary session.

Other duties assigned to the Governor include serving as commander-in-chief of the state's military establishment (the - National Guard), except when it has been called into federal service. Pardoning power also is vested in the Governor, subject to regulations and restrictions prescribed by law.

In addition, the Governor makes countless personal appearances at public and private events, and issues proclamations relating to matters of interest to the people of Washington.

Name: Jay Inslee
Position Title: Governor of the State of Washington

1. Position Objective

The Governor is responsible for administering the state's budget and is chief executive of state government. He serves approximately 7.7 million residents of the state of Washington and has responsibility for meeting a wide range of public needs within available resources. #### 5. Nature and Scope

A. Organization

See attached organizational chart. The Governor is the chief executive of Washington State Government and has final responsibility for the performance of the government's executive branch and the 99 state agencies, boards and commissions included in the Administration.

B. Management environment

The Governor must balance competing requirements, interests and political values of the entire state in order to provide the citizens of Washington with the services they need; and must do so amid shifting resources and demands.

C. Problem solving/decision making requirements

The Washington State Constitution gives the Governor considerable latitude to carry out the will of the people as manifested through the Legislature and the Initiative and Referendum process. The Governor has at his disposal an array of management and legal tools to assist him to be true to the people's will. His challenge is to appropriately employ those tools in a shifting, dynamic environment to ensure the safety and well-being of all Washington citizens. On a daily basis, he learns of new issues and challenges, and he must make decisions to employ appropriate tools and resources to address them. At the same time, he must maintain the delicate balance between his myriad responsibilities and the limited resources available to carry them out.

D. Accountability

The Governor's actions affect the entire state government and he is ultimately responsible for all activities of the executive branch.

The Governor works closely with the Washington State Legislature to carry out his role of approving or not approving measures sent to his desk by the Legislature. He works with the state's congressional delegation and others at the federal level and local government levels to secure actions that benefit Washington State.

E. Planning

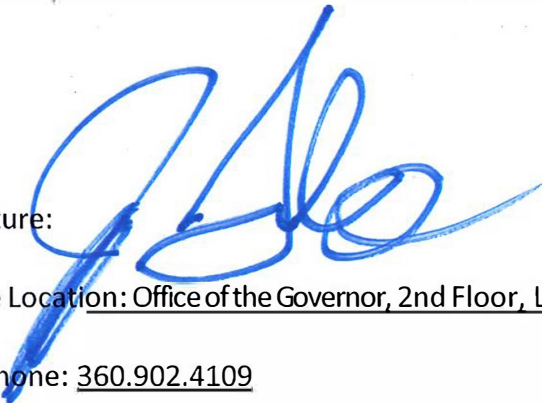

The Governor engages in continuous policy and budget planning with the aim of ensuring that citizen needs are balanced with available resources and ensuring that state government is accountable to citizens.
